The musical opens in 1942, as the United States is entering World War II. The country is in desperate need of munitions, and women are being recruited to work in factories to produce them. The women who work at the munitions factory in the musical are from all walks of life. There are housewives, mothers, and young women just starting out in their careers. They all have different reasons for working at the factory, but they are all united by their determination to do their part for the war effort.

The women who work at the munitions factory face a number of challenges. The work is dangerous, and they are constantly at risk of injury or death. They also have to deal with the prejudice of their male co-workers, who often view them as inferior. Despite these challenges, the women persevere. They work long hours, and they never give up on their goal of helping the war effort.
