Ashley Marie Mireles is a disabled farmer, advocate, and entrepreneur. She is the founder of Is For Farm, a non-profit organization that supports farmers with disabilities. Ashley is passionate about making farming more accessible and inclusive for people of all abilities.

Early Life and Education

Ashley was born in California and raised on a small farm. She was diagnosed with cerebral palsy at a young age, which affects her mobility and fine motor skills. Despite her disability, Ashley always loved being outdoors and working on the farm.

After graduating high school, Ashley attended California Polytechnic State University, where she studied agricultural business. She was the first person with a disability to graduate from the program.

Is For Farm

In 2015, Ashley founded Is For Farm, a non-profit organization that supports farmers with disabilities. The organization provides resources, training, and mentorship to farmers with disabilities, and advocates for policies that make farming more accessible and inclusive.

Is For Farm's mission is to "create a more just and equitable food system where farmers with disabilities are empowered to succeed." The organization's work has been featured in numerous media outlets, including The New York Times, The Washington Post, and NPR.

Ashley's Advocacy Work

In addition to her work with Is For Farm, Ashley is also a vocal advocate for disability rights. She has testified before Congress on the need for more accessible farming policies, and she has spoken at numerous conferences and events about the importance of inclusion in agriculture.

Ashley's advocacy work has helped to raise awareness about the challenges faced by farmers with disabilities, and it has led to changes in policy that make farming more accessible and inclusive.

Awards and Recognition

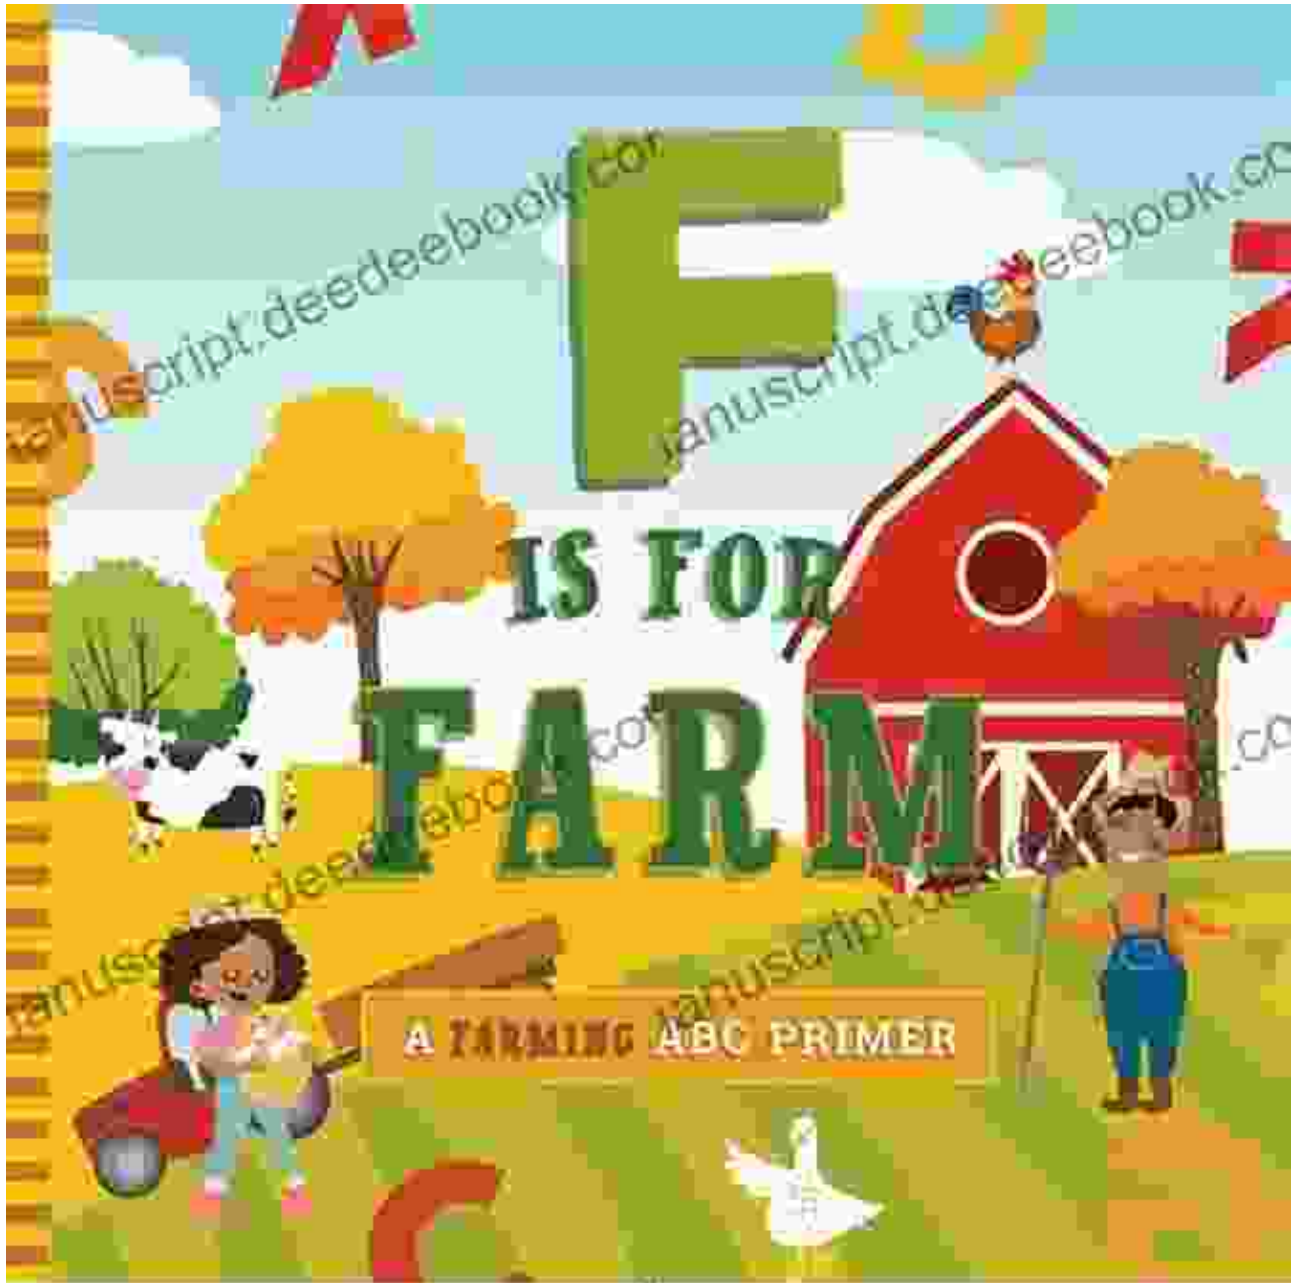

Ashley has been recognized for her work with Is For Farm and her advocacy for disability rights. She has received numerous awards, including the National Council on Disability's Emerging Leader Award and the American Farm Bureau Federation's Young Farmer and Rancher Achievement Award.

Ashley is a role model for farmers with disabilities and for people with disabilities in all walks of life. She is a powerful advocate for inclusion and accessibility, and she is working to create a more just and equitable food system for all.

Ashley Marie Mireles is a remarkable woman who is making a difference in the world. Her work with Is For Farm is helping to make farming more accessible and inclusive for people with disabilities, and her advocacy work is helping to raise awareness about the challenges faced by people with disabilities.

Ashley is an inspiration to us all, and she is a reminder that anything is possible if you have the passion and the determination to succeed.
