The first book in the trilogy, The White Queen, tells the story of Elizabeth Woodville, who becomes queen when she marries Edward IV. Elizabeth is a beautiful and ambitious woman, and she quickly gains the favor of the king. However, her marriage to Edward is not without its challenges. Edward is a powerful and ruthless king, and he often treats Elizabeth with contempt. Elizabeth must also contend with the hostility of the queen mother, Margaret of Anjou. Margaret is a fierce and determined woman, and she is determined to regain the throne for her son, Edward of Lancaster.

The second book in the trilogy, The Red Queen, tells the story of Margaret of Anjou. Margaret is a strong and courageous woman, and she is determined to fight for her son's right to the throne. Margaret's marriage to Henry VI is not a happy one. Henry is a weak and indecisive king, and he is often manipulated by his advisors. Margaret must also contend with the hostility of the Yorkists. The Yorkists are led by Richard, Duke of York, who is determined to claim the throne for himself.

The third book in the trilogy, The Kingmaker's Daughter, tells the story of Anne Neville. Anne is the daughter of Richard Neville, the Earl of Warwick. Warwick is a powerful and ambitious man, and he is determined to use his daughter to secure his own political ambitions. Anne is married to Edward, Prince of Wales, but her marriage is not a happy one. Edward is a cruel and abusive husband. Anne must also contend with the hostility of the Yorkists and the Lancastrians. The Yorkists are led by Richard, Duke of York, who is determined to claim the throne for himself. The Lancastrians are led by Henry VI, who is determined to regain the throne for his son, Edward of Lancaster.
